Taxing at One Level But Spending at Another

One of the major problems the 1973 General Assembly and Gov. Dale Bumpers were confronted with in the opening week of the session, judging from the Associated Press report in Monday's Star, is the prohibitive demand made upon the state's general revenue by the cities and counties.

Jointly the local governments want 7 per cent—4 for the cities and 3 for the counties.

Such a bill has already been introduced; also a compromise measure offering considerably less—but the governor refused to endorse it, just as he rejected the 7 per cent proposal.

The County Judges Association and the Municipal League working together pack a hefty political clout—enough, perhaps, to force an eventual compromise. But even that may be in doubt after the legislators have heard from the people back home.

The cities and counties do need more revenue. But the people are building up a head of steam against the devious ways politicians latch onto spending money without the public's consent.

What is becoming increasingly clear is that one government levies taxes that an entirely different government will spend.

Thus the federals are sharing their revenue with the states and local governments, and now the counties and cities make an exorbitant demand on tax funds of the state—and unnoticed at the bottom of the political totem pole is the individual citizen who not only has lost his pocketbook but his voice in government as well.

The cities and counties need more revenue—and one of the reasons this newspaper fought for ratification of the proposed new Arkansas constitution was that it provided increased means for local government to create revenue at the local level. The new constitution was rejected—and I don't know that there is any evidence to show that the organized city and county governments lifted a hand to help it.

Confronted with the present crisis in Little Rock the average Arkansawyer is pretty apt to conclude that if the legislature gives the cities and counties what they want from the general revenue fund there will be no end to taxation at the state level.

And Mr. John Citizen is a shrewd character, indeed.

He has the answer even before the issue has been resolved.

Prisoner ends hunger strike

DUBLIN (AP) — Sean MacStiofain, the jailed chief staff of the Irish Republican Army's provisional wing, ended his eight-week-old hunger strike today after the IRA command ordered him to "get fit," official sources reported.

The 44-year-old prisoner, weakened by his ordeal, took "liquid nourishment" in the hospital at the Curragh Army Camp. His wife had told him of the IRA order.

A medical source at the camp said MacStiofain will be gradually put on solid foods.

MacStiofain vowed when he was arrested Nov. 19 he would neither eat nor drink until he was released. He took a sip of water 10 days later when his priest warned him bloodshed would follow if he died and then kept up his strength with tea, glucose and water. But several days ago he refused everything but water after IRA partisans accused him of not sticking to his strike.

Ceasefire to be declared Friday

SAIGON (AP) — A cease-fire will be declared by the United States and South Vietnam on the eve of President Nixon's inauguration Saturday to pave the way toward signing of a peace agreement to end the Indochina war, South Vietnamese sources said tonight.

Nixon was said to have advised President Nguyen Van Thieu that an international agreement has been reached to preclude further hostilities by North Vietnam, and to have told Thieu to "trust in me."

At the Florida White House, administration spokesmen had no comment on the report. "There will be a great number of these reports. We are not going to have comment. We are not going to discuss the subject," Deputy press secretary Neal Ball said.

The unilateral cease-fire would be designed to set the stage for an exchange of prisoners and for the signing by the foreign ministers of the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong of the peace settlement drafted at Paris, the informants said.

There was no clear understanding of whether Hanoi and the Viet Cong had agreed to the allied cease-fire. However, the sources, who have had access to discussions by Thieu and other top-level South Vietnamese leaders of the latest draft proposal, said concessions had been made by both sides on essential issues blocking the peace treaty.

These reports came after Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. conferred for 2½ hours with Thieu on the draft proposal worked out by Henry A. Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho in Paris.

Official sources said North Vietnam and the United States had agreed on the size of an international force to supervise the cease-fire. South Vietnamese sources said the new draft still left unresolved such basic Saigon demands as the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam and restoration of the demilitarized zone between the North and South. But progress toward agreement was reported on those also.

The U.S. Embassy indicated there would be further meetings between Haig and Thieu and said the schedule of President Nixon's special emissary was "open-ended."

There were unconfirmed reports from Vietnamese sources that Haig brought a personal letter from Nixon to Thieu. But political sources in Saigon and Washington indicated that the halt in all attacks on North Vietnam which began Monday was not only a sign of good faith to Hanoi but also a message to Thieu that Nixon considers a just agreement is within grasp and he is determined to conclude it.

Sharp fighting still reported

SAIGON (AP) — Sharp fighting was reported today in contested areas at both ends of South Vietnam as Saigon's forces and the Communists battled to gain or hold territory in advance of a cease-fire.

U.S. air support for South Vietnamese ground forces continued following President Nixon's order suspending all bombing and other offensive operations against North Vietnamese territory.

U. S. planes also continued combat operations in Laos and Cambodia, the U.S. Command said.

South Vietnamese military spokesmen reported a slight increase in Communist attacks in the 24 hours ending at 6 a.m. but there was also a significant quickening of activity on the part of Saigon's forces, military sources said.

The heaviest engagements reported by spokesmen were in the Que Son Valley southwest of Da Nang, where 35 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were claimed to have been killed, and on the eastern edge of the Mekong Delta's U Minh Forest. Government forces there lost 19 killed and 35 wounded while at least 52 enemy troops were slain, a military communique said.

Both of these areas have been the scene of increasing activity in the past week as the South Vietnamese tried to regain some of the territory that was lost or remains contested from the Communists' 1972 offensive.

Fighting also continued in Quang Tri province just below the demilitarized zone, where delayed field reports said South Vietnamese marines trying to secure ground north of the Thach Han River were driven back by an attack Sunday. There was no report on casualties in the action.

Military sources said some of the fighting also resulted from South Vietnamese spoiling operations aimed at preventing the Communists from scoring gains before a cease-fire.

In one major South Vietnamese army push in the Saigon River corridor 35 to 40 miles northwest of Saigon, ground contact was reported at a slow pace with only scattered casualties on each side.

Investigating deaths of two Hope youths

Law enforcement officers, ambulance drivers, and other persons surround a 1969 Plymouth in which the bodies of two blacks — Brenda Flenory and Bennie Stuart, both 19 — were found about 11:15 a.m. Monday in the back of the city park on N. Spruce St. Miss Flenory was from Hope and Stuart was a resident of Washington. Coroner J. T. Honeycutt ruled that the deaths were caused by carbon monoxide poisoning, resulting from a leaky exhaust system on the car. The bodies were discovered by Stuart's brother, Arie Lee, after the family had reported him missing to the sheriff's office. Sgt. Carl D. Ward and Patrolman Joe McCulley of the City Police Department and Sheriff Henry Sinyard investigated.

Hicks Funeral Home will be in charge of arrangements.

Commission receives new member, more criticism from the legislature

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The state Highway Commission received a new member and more criticism Monday.

James Branyan, a Camden businessman, took the oath as Gov. Dale Bumpers' appointee to a 10-year term on the commission and then defended the commission against criticism that it has been unresponsive.

"I know and I think the people of Arkansas will seriously consider that the Highway Department and the commission have done a good job," said Branyan. "...I don't agree that the commission has been unresponsive."

His comments to newsmen came shortly after the Arkansas House approved a bill to force the commission to add 10 to 12 miles of county roads in each county to the state highway system. Approved on a vote of 85-4, the bill was sent to the Senate for consideration.

Several representatives indicated that they were supporting the measure because they thought the Highway Commission had been neglecting rural road improvements.

Rep. Lloyd R. George of Danville said improvement of rural roads was a pressing problem. But he said the Highway commissioners "will not assist us and do not have a plan" for upgrading rural roads.

At the same time, Rep. Roscoe Brown of Jonesboro introduced a proposed constitutional amendment to increase the size of the commission from five to 10 members and to cut their terms from 10 to six years.

"I want to give the independence to the Highway Department that it needs, but still reduce the terms and make it receptive to the people," Brown said, adding that doubling the size of the commission would make it more representative.

He also said: "Any commissioner with a 10-year term by nature tends to get a little away from the people."

Branyan, 40, comes on the commission at a time when it is pushing a $416 million road construction bond issue that would be tied a two-cent increase in the per gallon tax on gasoline. The bond bill has not been introduced in the legislature and Branyan declined to say whether he favored the proposal.

He also would not take a position on a proposal by Rep. B.D. "Doug" Brandon of Little Rock to earmark a one-cent increase in the gasoline tax and all of the state's annual federal revenue sharing funds to finance highway construction. But Branyan said the proposition had merit.

The bill by Rep. Ode Maddox of Oden approved Monday by the House would establish a committee in each county to decide after consultation with the Highway Commission which county roads would be added to the state system. Each committee would be composed of the county judge and the representatives and senators who are elected from any portion of the county.

The bill would add a minimum of 750 miles to the state system from the counties.

Soviet moon rover lands in Sea of Serenity

MOSCOW (AP) — An unmanned Soviet spaceship made a soft landing on the moon today and put out a 1,848-pound moon rover that sent television pictures back to the earth, Tass announced.

The Soviet news agency said the spaceship, Luna 21, landed on the eastern fringe of the Sea of Serenity, inside the Lemnigher Crater, at 1:35 a.m., or 5:35 p.m. EST Monday.

The self-propelled Lunokhod 2 rolled down the gangway to the lunar surface at 4:14 a.m., Tass reported. Lunokhod 2 moved about, its running gear and control systems were checked by the ground crew, and "television pictures of the landing stage and the lunar landscape were received," Tass said.

Lunokhod 2 will continue the work of Lunokhod 1, a 1,663-pound moon vehicle that spent 10 months exploring the lunar surface in 1970-71, Tass said.

Like Lunokhod 1, Lunokhod 2 had aboard a French "corner reflector" supplied under the Soviet-French agreement on co-operation in exploration in outer space. The announcement said this would continue experiments in fixing the moon's location more accurately by laser readings.

Tass said Lunokhod 2 will remain stationary until Thursday, recharging its chemical power supply with the help of a solar battery. Then it will go ahead with its program.

Luna 21, the first Soviet moon venture in nearly a year, was launched Jan. 8 and after a five-day flight went into orbit around the moon.

The Soviets have issued very little information about it and have not indicated any new equipment was on board. The unmanned Lunokhod 2 is presumably of the same type as Lunokhod 1, an eight-wheel vehicle powered by the sun's rays that will travel about sending television pictures back to earth.

Alert 3-year-old rewarded by RR

Roger Smithson, three-year-old-son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Smithson of McCaskill, stood in his yard Tuesday of last week and waved, as he always does, at a passing Prescott and Northwestern train.

Benny Phillips, head brakeman for P&NW, noticed Roger running back into his house. "Roger always stayed in the yard and waved until the train was out of sight," Phillips said. Roger went after his father and had him flag the train.

The train stopped and it was discovered that the front trucks of a loaded car had jumped out of place causing a fire underneath the car. "Had Roger not seen this and had he not had the train flagged, there could have been considerable more damage to the car and the train could have derailed," Phillips said.

On Jan. 12, Phillips presented Roger a $50 Savings Bond on behalf of the Prescott and Northwestern Railroad Company.

Testimony continues in Watergate 7 case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Utah college student has told the Watergate case jury he stopped working as a Republican spy in the Democratic camp after a close shave in an effort to bug the headquarters of Sen. George McGovern.

Thomas Gregory resumed testifying Monday after a four-day pause during which four more defendants pleaded guilty. The plea changes make it unlikely that the trial will produce the full story behind the break-in and bugging of Democratic party headquarters last summer.

Seven men were charged in connection with the break-in but only two remain on trial: G. Gordon Liddy, former counsel to President Nixon's campaign finance committee, and James W. McCord Jr., security chief for the Nixon campaign.

On Monday, the sixth day of the trial, U.S. Dist. Court Judge John J. Sirica accepted the guilty pleas of four Miami men after questioning them at length and saying at one point to their unrevealing answers: "I'm sorry. I don't believe you."

The judge refused to declare a mistrial, requested by attorneys for Liddy and McCord. They argued that the sudden absence of five defendants would give the jury the impression that since the five had pleaded guilty, the remaining two also were guilty.

Charges against the seven include conspiracy, burglary and illegal wiretapping.

Sirica set bond at $100,000 for each of the four. Their lawyers said later they could not raise it and would stay in jail while awaiting sentencing.

The same bond had been set for former White House consultant E. Howard Hunt Jr., who pleaded guilty last Wednesday, but he posted it the same day.

Gregory testified last Thursday that he had been recruited by Hunt to infiltrate the presidential campaigns of McGovern and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

As he resumed his testimony Monday, Gregory said Hunt introduced him to McCord in mid-May 1972. He said McCord expressed interest in planting electronic listening devices in the offices of McGovern campaign officials.

On a visit to McGovern headquarters, Gregory said, McCord went through the building observing the burglary-alarm system and the location of exits. He said he later was introduced to Liddy, who went along on a nighttime reconnaissance of the area around McGovern headquarters.

Gregory said he refused to provide keys to the building, but agreed to go to the McGovern headquarters on Sunday, May 28, stay late enough to be the last one out and leave some locks open. But, he said, he was discovered by another man working at the headquarters who wanted to know why Gregory was there.

At this, Gregory said, he left and called to warn Hunt, and the bugging operation was called off.

Gregory said he had a final meeting June 15 to tell Hunt he wanted out of the operation. He said he had been paid a total of $3,400 by Hunt for his work.

All this time, Gregory said, he was getting academic credit from Brigham Young University for working in a political campaign.

Sen. Hughes to try to block nominations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harold E. Hughes, protesting lack of information on the Vietnam war, says he will try to block until Inauguration Day the Senate confirmation of President Nixon's nominees to top intelligence and defense positions.

In addition, Hughes called for public hearings before the Senate Armed Services Committee on the financial holdings of Elliot L. Richardson and William P. Clements Jr.

Richardson, now secretary of health, education and welfare, has been nominated to succeed Melvin R. Laird as secretary of defense on Jan. 20. Clements, a Dallas oil-drilling contractor, has been named deputy secretary of defense.

Chairman John C. Stennis, holding out for private examination of the nominees' financial holdings, said he hoped to bring the nominations to a committee vote today.

Meanwhile, three other Nixon nominations were approved by the Senate Commerce Committee. Monday's action clears the way for Senate votes on Claude S. Brinegar, named transportation secretary; Egil Krogh, nominated to be undersecretary of transportation, and Frederick Dent, selected commerce secretary.

Hughes made his demand for a public airing of Richardson's and Clements' holdings at an open meeting Monday. Richardson and Clements expressed their willingness to testify before congressional committees upon demand.

Richardson told newsmen that he is willing to have public disclosure of his financial inventory.

Sales tax bill is introduced

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Rep. Rudy Moore Jr. of Springdale introduced a bill Monday to permit cities of the first class to levy a one per cent sales tax if city residents approve.

Moore described his bill as a self-help proposal designed to alleviate the cities' financial plight.

"The state should give them more help—I don't know what the amount should be—but my bill also gives them a chance to help themselves," he said.

While he said he did not know how much more state aid the cities should be given, Moore said he opposed the controversial demand by the cities and counties for a seven per cent share of state general revenues. But he said the $6 million the cities currently share and the $6 million the counties now divide annually is not enough.

The representative introduced his bill shortly after the legislature's Joint Budget Committee voted to recommend that the General Assembly approve Gov. Dale Bumpers' city-county aid proposal.

Corona jury deadlocked

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — The jury in the Juan Corona mass murder trial has reported an 8-4 deadlock, but the panel has been ordered to continue trying to reach a verdict.

Judge Richard E. Patton instructed the jurors on Monday not to reveal whether the majority favors conviction or acquittal for Corona, who is charged with the slayings of 25 men.

After 28 hours of jury deliberations in four days, jury foreman Ernest Phillips told the court, "We have reached what appears to be an impasse. We cannot decide one way or the other about the guilt or innocence."

Patton ordered the jurors in the 14-week trial to continue their efforts and not to report back before noon today.

Truck hits man

James M. Page, 27, of Little Rock was killed Monday afternoon when he was struck by a tractor-trailer truck on State Highway 29 about 3.5 miles south of Hope, according to the State Police.

Page, working on the reconstruction of a pipeline for the Arkansas-Louisiana Gas Company was struck when the truck swerved into a ditch to avoid hitting another vehicle that blocked the roadway on a curve, the State Police said.

The truck, owned by Harold Bobo, was driven by George C. McRoy, 23, of Hope. The truck turned over on its right side following the accident.

Page was transferred to Hempstead County Memorial Hospital by Hempstead County Ambulance Service where he was pronounced dead.

Funeral arrangements will be by Dillinger Funeral Service of Newport.

Urban Renewal's proposed parking plan

Above is an artist's concept of the proposed traffic plan for downtown Hope with the completion of the Urban Renewal program sometime next year. Traffic will be one-way south on Main from the plaza at the intersection of Second and Main and one-way north from the plaza to the Missouri-Pacific Depot. One-way traffic will also be in effect east on Second from Elm to Main and west on Second from Walnut to the Main St. plaza.

Seniority system out. But you'd never know it.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders say that the Senate has abandoned the seniority system, and the official procedures bear that out—but you'd never know it from looking at the committee assignments.

In fact, with both Democrats and Republicans electing chairmen, senior members and other committee members, the senior man won out each time—without opposition, so far as is known.

The only exceptions were in instances where the senior men already had the top spot elsewhere.

Most senators say, in fact, there is unlikely to be any challenge for committee chairmanships except in unusual circumstances.

rey's longer service was interrupted.

The Republicans this year followed the example established by the Democrats several years ago and decided to let the GOP members of a committee, subject to approval by the party caucus, elect their ranking member.

Superbudget agency for Congress asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A superbudget agency for Congress was proposed today by Rep. Ogden R. Reid, who said it is needed "to strip the President of his power to ignore congressional mandates."

As envisioned by the New York Democrat, an "office of budget and expenditure oversight" in a reconstituted General Accounting Office, would be an arm of Congress with "broad powers to withhold funds or compel spending by the executive (branch of government) in accordance with congressional mandates."

"The new agency also would have the authority to pass on the administration's legislative proposals, to oversee implementation of congressionally approved programs, and to force the executive to provide Congress with any information necessary and proper to the discharge of the constitutional responsibilities of Congress."

In remarks prepared for a news conference, Reid said the budget office would "restore the constitutional prerogatives of the legislative branch."

Reid accused President Nixon of grabbing authority which the Constitution gave Congress, refusing to carry out programs approved by Congress, evading congressional supervision, and refusing to give the legislators information about administrative actions.

Reid's legislation would take away a president's power to appoint the comptroller general—head of GAO. Instead, GAO would be supervised by officials chosen by Congress.

Meantime, a bipartisan Senate-House committee, selected to devise better congressional control of the budget, decided Monday to study the possibility of an annual spending ceiling set by Congress.

Last year, Congress rejected President Nixon's request for a $250 billion ceiling and power to make spending cutbacks to stay within the ceiling.

However, Nixon has impounded funds without specific congressional authorization.

Move by 'Mutt' may mark beginning of end for ERA

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A bit of parliamentary maneuvering Monday by state Sen. Guy H. "Mutt" Jones of Conway may prove to be the beginning of the end to a proposal to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Jones successfully recalled a resolution to ratify the amendment from the State Agencies and Governmental Affairs Committee so it could be amended, but because of a procedural rule he was blocked temporarily in his attempt to offer an amendment.

Jones said the amendment, which he plans to introduce "as soon as possible," would change the language of the proposed resolution to limit the equal rights application only to employment. Sen. Morris Henry of Fayetteville, sponsor of the resolution, said Jones' amendment would, in effect, kill the measure.

After successfully calling the resolution from the committee, Jones was not allowed to introduce the amendment because it had not been placed in advance on the desks of the senators.

Henry then made a motion that the resolution be returned to the committee so that a public hearing on it could be held. The motion failed after Jones said he would offer his amendment and return the bill to committee before Jan. 23 — the date set for the public hearing.

Jones, who said he opposed the Equal Rights Amendment, said the effects of the measure could eventually be "numi-table, tragic and unforeseeable."

"I have no idea what we're considering," Jones said. "We don't know how the U.S. Supreme Court might eventually interpret this amendment. I'm just trying to add a safeguard."

Sen. J.A. Womack of Camden spoke opposing Jones' first motion to recall the resolution from committee saying:

"We've got enough hot potatoes without taking up this measure this early in the session."

Jones said he was trying "to slow down a thundering locomotive until we see what the effects of the amendment might be."

Opposing groups of women filled the halls at the state Capitol Monday to battle over the proposed ratification.

OBU races to seventh victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The rich got richer and the poor became poorer in Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference basketball Monday night.

Four of the top five teams won their league battles.

Ouachita, the defending champ and the leader this season, raced to its seventh straight with a 77-73 decision over State College of Arkansas.

In other league games, Southern State dumped Ozarks 92-66, Henderson turned back Hendrix 89-80, and Arkansas College drubbed Harding 80-59. Arkansas Tech got back on the winning track with a 71-64 victory over Cameron State in a nonconference game.

Ouachita, down 30-29 at halftime in the game at Conway, roared back in the second half behind the hot shooting of Jim Hamilton, who scored 27 of his 33 points in the last half. SCA, which fell to 4-3 in AIC play, had led by as much as seven points in the second half before the Tigers pulled ahead 53-52 with 8:45 to go. Maurice Scarbrough contributed 22 points to the Tiger attack. Joe Couch with 23 and John Hutchcraft with 22 led SCA.

Milton Sullivan fired in 28 points to lead the Arkansas College Scots to their victory over the Harding Bison at Batesville. Elliott Jackson, the AIC's leading scorer with a 25.1 average, contributed 18 points to the Scot attack. Fred Dixon and Tim Vick each scored 14 for Harding. The Scots led 39-32 at halftime. Arkansas College now is 5-2 in AIC play and Harding is 2-5.

Eugene Grant pumped in 33 points and hauled down 16 rebounds to lead Tech to the upset over Cameron State at Russellville. Earlier in the season, Cameron had whipped Tech 117-67. This was only Tech's second victory against 12 defeats this season. Tech gained the lead with 4:06 left in the first half and was ahead the rest of the game. Bobby Furrer had 14 points and Ron Edmonds 12 for the Wonder Boys. Jerry Davenport led the Aggies with 22 points, followed by Mike Fleming with 20 and Rodger Smith with ten.

At Arkadelphia, Henderson built up a 51-39 halftime lead and then held off Hendrix for the victory. Hendrix pulled within two points at 69-67 with five minutes left to play, but Henderson turned on the steam and pulled away. Steve Reynolds flipped in 24 points for the Reddies and Larry Bray added 23. Tom Poole had 28 for Hendrix and Danny Thomas added 17. Henderson remained in second place in the AIC race with a 6-1 record and Hendrix fell to 3-4.

Southern State opened up a 48-29 halftime lead and breezed to its victory over College of the Ozarks at Clarksville. Clifton Lewis meshed 19 and Johnny White 18 points for the Mulieriders. Gary Metcalf led Ozarks with 27 points and Eugene Gipson added 18. The Mulieriders now have a 5-2 AIC record and Ozarks is winless in seven games.

Two schools struck by demonstrations

By RANDY SCHMID

Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) —

Pupil anti-busing demonstrations struck two public schools Monday as the president of the Memphis Board of Education said he expects "fairly large-scale withdrawals" from the school system.

The demonstrations were peaceful and occurred at Frayser and Trezevant high schools. The latter also saw a pupil walkout Friday.

Meanwhile, school board president Hunter Lane Jr. told city leaders at a luncheon that the 135,000-pupil school system faces budget problems if there is any major "white flight" next week when desegregation busing starts. The system is 57 per cent black.

State support of schools is based on average daily attendance. "We expect fairly large-scale withdrawals by white parents, especially until they see what's going to happen," said Lane. "We're going to do everything possible to allay their fears as to physical violence."

"We're not so naive as to believe that everyone's going to get together the first day and be filled with brotherhood."

An estimated 250 pupils staged walkouts at the two high schools Monday, and police said they arrested one youth for disorderly conduct.

Officers said the walkouts involved dwindling numbers of pupils as the day wore on, but were marked by chanting and shouting of obscenities.

L. R. Polk, principal of Trezevant High School, had insisted Friday that a demonstration then involved only 150 pupils. Polk conceded Monday that 318 pupils were suspended in connection with Friday's walkout.

Journalist is released

HONG KONG (AP) —

Australian journalist Francis James walked across the Shum Chun border bridge from China Tuesday and collapsed on the Hong Kong side.

James, who has been detained in China since 1969 on espionage charges, was carried to a room in the Hong Kong border station. Officials said a medical officer was waiting there for his release.

A Hong Kong government information service official said James, 54, started to walk slowly across the covered bridge after being released by Communist officials on the China side.

Newsmen and photographers were barred from the border area at the request of Australian officials.

Border officers said James would be taken immediately to a hospital for physical examination and possible treatment and would not be available to meet newsmen "for at least some time."

Australian officials in Canberra had said Monday that James was in good health.

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam announced that James was being "deported" by Chinese officials, and quoted the Chinese as saying James had been found guilty of espionage.

Whitlam said the Chinese told Australian officials in Peking that James was being deported as a friendly gesture now that diplomatic relations had been established between China and Australia.

James, a former grammar school classmate of Whitlam, was last sighted on the Chinese side of the Hong Kong-China border in December of 1969. At that time, border sources reported James appeared to be arguing with Chinese officials and then was seen being led away.

The four level transfer response to an opening no-trump bid was invented around 1951 by David Carter of St. Louis and independently by Olle Willner of Stockholm. Willner also extended it to the three level and Richard Troxel of Minneapolis extended it down to the two level.

The NAACP had called for busing of up to 60,000 pupils. In appearing before McRae Monday, school board lawyers said only that they would try to avoid further busing at schools involved in the transportation that starts next week.

McRae told the lawyers to appear before him again Feb. 1 with another progress report.

Arkansas ranks high in cases of gonorrhea, report claims

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Public Health Service office in Atlanta, Ga., reported Monday that 193 cases of gonorrhea were reported in Arkansas for the week ending Jan. 6.

Without taking population into consideration, the total was 17th highest among the 50 states, exceeding the reported totals of such states as New Jersey and Wisconsin. On a per capita basis, state Health Department officials said, Arkansas ranks about 7th or 8th in the most cases reported not only in the category of gonorrhea, but also in the category of syphilis.

Dr. G. Doty Murphy, director of the Communicable Disease Division of the state Health Department, said that in fiscal 1971 about 8,000 cases were reported in Arkansas, but that this jumped to about 10,000 in fiscal 1972.

In the current year, which is fiscal 1973, predictions are that 12,000 cases will be reported in Arkansas, Murphy said.

Surveys indicate that many private physicians do not report gonorrhea cases that come to their attention, Murphy said, adding that this had led the department to conclude that the reported cases represent only about 10 per cent of the actual number that occur. That, he said, would represent more than 100,000 actual cases in Arkansas, or roughly 5 per cent of the state's population.

Of concern to health authorities is a cutback in federal funds for established programs to combat the increase in venereal diseases. The state program in the current fiscal year relies on a state appropriation of $38,000 and federal funds totaling $374,000, Murphy said. He said the federal contribution was being trimmed to $230,000.

Health officials asked the Arkansas Legislative Council to increase the state share to compensate for the federal funds — an appropriation of $100,000 was requested — but legislators have indicated they will increase the state appropriation for the program to about $60,000.

Murphy said the federal money was awarded under a program that appeared designed to establish centers that would be focal points in the fight to reduce the gonorrhea outbreak, but that once the program was established funding for continuing the fight would have to be provided at the state level.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Fat is the key

Know lowdown on skim milk

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I am on a restricted number of calories for weight control. I drink several glasses of milk a day and use it on cereal and in coffee. Could you please explain the difference in skim milk and nonfat milk fortified with two per cent nonfat milk solids, and how many calories there are in an eight-ounce glass of each? I cannot get fortified skim milk in our area, and no calorie counter lists the count for nonfat milk. According to an article I read, some of the so-called nonfat milk contains almost as many calories as whole milk.

Dear Reader—Although there are some variations depending on the type and amounts of milk solids added to fortify milk and also depending upon the percentage of fat content in milk, the approximate calorie values for one eight-ounce glass of the commonly available milk products are as follows:

skimmed, plain 94
skimmed, fortified with 2% nonfat solids 103
fat, 1%, fortified 125
with 2% nonfat solids 125
fat, 2%, fortified 142
with 2% nonfat solids 142
whole milk, 3.5% fat 160

Some of the commercial fortified skim milk products do contain from one-half to one per cent fat. Even so, I doubt very much that you are going to find a real skim milk fortified with nonfat solids product which has anywhere near the same amount of calories that whole milk contains.

You will get more nutrients and more calcium in fortified skim milk than you will in whole milk, merely because the nonfat solids which are added contain additional calcium. Most commercial skim milk, whether it is fortified or not, would meet your needs just as well, although most people prefer the taste of the fortified skim milk.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I read your column regarding abdominal exercises. While in college majoring in physical education, I became extremely interested in corrective physical education. During this time I experimented in all types of conditioning and body building exercises with particular emphasis on the mid-section.

One of the best exercises for the lower abdomen is done by lying on your back on the floor with the legs outstretched. To begin, slowly bend at the knees, keeping the knees together and keeping the heels as close to the floor as long as possible. Continue bending at the knees and hips until the knees touch the chest. Return slowly to the starting position and repeat as many times as possible.

When first started, it will be easier to hold on to the legs of a heavy chair or couch. Eventually as the muscles get stronger, it will be possible to do this exercise without holding on to anything. Anyone who can develop the capacity to perform 30 to 40 repetitions will have developed a strong and healthy mid-section.

Dear Reader—Thank you for your helpful suggestion. Any of the exercises which involve lifting the legs up while lying flat on the floor, then spreading the feet apart or bringing up the knees as you suggest, or holding the legs straight out with the knees straight and the heels just off the floor will tend to strengthen the abdominal muscles, particularly those troublesome ones in the lower region.

Helen Help Us!

—by Helen Bottel—

More on the Big Bash Blues
DEAR HELEN:

After surviving all those holiday bashes, I feel like sending "Meredith's" comment on cocktail parties—and your combat techniques— anonymously to a few hosts and hostesses. We go because we're in business and can't risk snubbing friends, but I wonder if other people have my reaction:

I'm not a bad-looking woman, dress fairly well, have a lovely home and other so-called status symbols—yet why do I always want to fade into the wallpaper at cocktail parties? Do others feel as insecure as I? If I don't know many people and have to just stand there looking at my husband, I feel as if I must have leprosy.

Is it the cocktail party format that's uncomfortable, or do I have a problem? —M.G.

DEAR M.:

Your only problem is that you're a somewhat private person in a much too public place—and you have lots of company. Maybe you're like me: my normal voice doesn't carry in a crowd of talkers. I can't think when I shout—so I nod my head and smile a lot. It's better than morning-after hoarseness, though I look and feel insecure.

Or, as one gal said, "Everybody seems to be having a better time than I am, so I take another drink to catch up, and then get even quieter for fear I'll talk tipsy."

Cocktail parties are for extroverts. If you can't participate, then observe. One learns much about human nature this way—and the time goes faster. —H.

DEAR HELEN:

I wish I could talk with "Devastated" who had the "perfect marriage," until she found out her husband had had an affair (now ended). I, too, was intolerant when I discovered my supposedly faithful husband succumbed to a woman who deliberately set out to entrap him. Shocked and unforgiving, I divorced the husband who had been so good to me—I guess it hurts even worse when your marriage is a happy one.

After four years of loneliness, I had an affair with a very happily married man, and I now know how a person can care for TWO of the opposite sex. I've learned that none of us is perfect but we can be forgiving and understanding. "Devastated" may be loved even more by her husband because of his temporary infatuation. He had a momentary extension of sharing something with another human being. How sorry I am I didn't realize this four years ago! —J.T.M.

DEAR HELEN:

A year ago my husband had an affair and I, like "Devastated," felt righteous and wronged, but I nobly forgave my contrite mate—at least I said words, while constantly making snide digs and "how could you do this to me" remarks.

One day my husband said, "Look, either truly forgive me and don't mention it again, or leave me. I can't pay for this forever."

I began to do some real soul searching. Do you know what had been "so terribly hurt" the most? My pride. I finally realized I had caused him to look elsewhere by making him feel unimportant, unloved in many seemingly innocent, even righteous ways. I had decided to make him pay, to watch him writhe under my barbed tongue lashings. And he did!

Much as I hated to admit it, I had truly known all along he loved only me. So who suffered the most, after all, and who committed the really unfaithful act? As you say, Helen, there are many forms of unfaithfulness, and perhaps sexual wandering isn't the worst. So I asked my husband to forgive ME, and now we're closer than ever before. —BETTER MARKED THAN MARTYRED

This old world has 147 nation-states, give or take a few

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — By latest count, the world has 147 independent nation states—give or take a few—and a bunch of unfamiliar name tags dotting the map. Another is due in July.

Preparations are underway for nationhood for the Commonwealth of the Bahama Islands, a Caribbean neighbor which has been a British possession.

The Bahamas are expected to retain their name but not British Honduras, London's Central American colony, when it gains independence at some still unspecified future date.

British Honduras is slated to turn into Boelize, the land's native name, when the new national flag rises over the capital.

Sri Lanka is the island off the tip of India which became the independent country of Ceylon in 1948. Last May, becoming a republic under a new constitution, it adopted a name from its pre-British colonial days.

The biggest state in the heart of Africa isn't the Democratic Republic of the Congo any more. It's Zaire.

Bangladesh, the latest entry into the family of nations, was the eastern wing of Pakistan on the map before its break-away war in 1971.

All this comes with the continuing country explosion set off since World War II with the dismemberment of once great empires and the yearning of the newborn for an identity of their own, minus a lot of colonial reminders.

Only 70 states covered the globe a generation ago. The nation-state population has more than doubled since.

The postwar entries extend over about one fourth of the world's land surface, not counting Antarctica. Their citizens number more than a billion, a third of the global total.

People in the News

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon has turned his attention to the preparation of his inaugural and State of the Union speeches as he prepares to wind up a stay at the Florida White House.

Raymond K. Price, the President's chief speechwriter, is assisting Nixon, also here is H.R. Haldeman, chief of the White House office.

The President met with Haldeman Monday afternoon, and spent most of the day in his study. Among his telephone calls were conversations with the two coaches of Sunday's Super Bowl football game, Don Shula of the winning Miami Dolphins and George Allen of the Washington Redskins.

The President, who arrived here last Friday, is expected to return to Washington within the next day or so.

TOKYO (AP) — American singer Elvis Presley drew one of the highest Japanese television audiences ever for a single show, Nippon Television reports.

NTV said today the Sunday show, televised from Honolulu and carried here via satellite, was watched by 37.8 per cent of the Japanese who had their sets on during the one-hour Presley telecast.

Students are building an airplane for sale

ASH FORK, Ariz. (AP) — Last year high school pupils in this northern Arizona community of 900 built a two-bedroom house and sold it.

This year, they're aiming even higher. They're building an airplane and hope to fly it.

"I'm teaching these kids to survive," says School Supt. Bill Roark. "We want to keep these kids off the welfare rolls and also let them take a look at more of the world than Ash Fork offers them."

The aircraft being constructed under the direction of Lloyd Eash isn't a model. It's a full-size, fabric-covered plane complete with two seats and an 80 horsepower engine.

Five junior and senior pupils are working on the plane for class credit. Eash and the Federal Aviation Administration are keeping a close eye on them.

"The whole point is to establish a variety of salable skills since many of the students are not college bound," said Roark.

But once the aircraft — which Roark says will cost $2-500 — is built, it won't be sold. "We'll teach kids to fly the same as we teach them to drive," he said, adding that next year's project calls for building a larger, metal-frame airplane.

The plane is beginning to take shape in the school's industrial arts shop, with the plywood fuselage dominating the room and wing and tail sections tucked away in nooks and crannies, and Roark said the pupils hope to finish it before school closes for the summer.

Peter Bowers of Seattle, Wash., the designer of the aircraft, will be at the controls on the maiden flight, Roark said.

Bring us together? Nixon did, girl says

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Vicki Lynne Cole, the Ohio school girl whose hand-lettered campaign poster "Bring Us Together" inspired the 1968 inaugural theme, says President Nixon has done just that.

"The whole atmosphere of the country is a lot calmer than when he took office," the 17-year-old high school senior said. "I think he's done a great job and really brought us together."

Vicki, an avowed independent from Carey, Ohio, who was state chairman for future voters, said in a telephone interview that she has been most impressed by the President's trips to China and Russia.

"They really did the most to unite the country," she said. "They made Americans proud."

Evidently, many in Vicki's high school agree. "We had a mock election and Nixon beat (Democratic challenger George) McGovern 215 to 104 with 15 undecided," she said.

Vicki, daughter of a Methodist minister, was 13 when Nixon spotted her sign as he campaigned through the tiny community of Deshler, Ohio. She said she found it on the street after losing her own placard and didn't have time to notice the soon-to-be famous words.

Nixon adopted the "Bring Us Together" slogan Nov. 6, the morning after his first presidential victory. Later he changed the inaugural theme to "Forward Together."

Nixon invited Vicki and her family to be guests at the 1968 inauguration and, they watched the two-hour parade with him from the presidential VIP box.

This year, however, Vicki and her folks plan to watch the ceremonies from the television in their living room, mainly, Vicki said, "because we didn't receive any invitations this year."

Is she disappointed?

"No," Vicki said. "It was very exciting, but one inauguration was enough."

Grapes, lettuce, fasts and boycotts

Chavez mixes religion and politics

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

PALO ALTO, Calif. (NEA)—He doesn't look very inspiring. He is soft-spoken, rather slight, almost inconspicuous, and the microphone, the platform and the crowd seem to engulf him.

The crowd came to be entranced. For this is Cesar Chavez, whose name conjures up the mystical and the elevating for the socially concerned.

Because of Cesar Chavez, people from New York and Kansas City and Seattle swallowed with guilt every time they nibbled a sweet table grape—for five years.

Because of Cesar Chavez, they and people from Boston to Phoenix to San Francisco are presently careful whose lettuce they eat.

For Cesar Chavez is the head of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (UFWOC) whose weapon to improve conditions has been the nationwide boycott. But to the downtrodden, the poor, the ethnic minorities who are virtual vagrants as migrant farm workers, he is more than that. He is a symbol of pride, of hope for social dignity.

And so as he stands there, this self-educated former street corner tough, in the beautiful church with the alfresco mural in the middle of Stanford University, facing the collage of beautiful, young, intelligent, white faces of academia, and he says, "Our greatest accomplishment is not contracts or benefits, but that workers for the first time are being treated not as implements but as human beings."

He has been introduced by a sonorous professor as "one of the leading religious leaders of our time, with a worldwide reputation as a leading practitioner of nonviolence, a refutation of the slogan that religion and politics don't mix."

This symbiotic quality arouses an emotional fervor. "You are going to hear Cesar?" asks a young, bearded one as he rushes to the middle of the university campus. It is always, simply, Cesar.

The emotions are carefully nurtured.

"When Cesar comes in," announces one of his young aides, "you have to learn how to clap." You clap in rhythm to the two syllables of his name—"Se-sar"—like a throng at a football game.

At 8:39 p.m., 39 minutes late, an exalted declaration: "Cesar is here!" The claps begin, reach a crescendo.

And out walks this little, swarthy man in a dark-green sweater with a mock turtle-neck which virtually hides his shirt, and thick, long black straight hair which sweeps back over his neck.

His purpose in this appearance was to rally voter support against Proposition 22 on California's Nov. 7 ballot, a measure initiated by farm produce growers to prohibit certain kinds of strikes and boycotts by agricultural workers.

The proposition, which Chavez charged would hit at the core of his movement because "it would take away the biggest weapon we got," was defeated.

The states of Kansas, Idaho and Arizona already have a similar law on the books. Chavez claims his followers have collected 110,000 signatures, enough to force a recall election of the Arizona governor. Last spring Chavez endured his second public fast to call attention to his cause.

"We fasted in Arizona," he says, "not out of fear and not for publicity, but to get to the hearts of men who proposed this legislation."

Chavez became a national figure with his first public fast in 1968 at the time of the "Great Boycott"—when he was attempting to get the grape growers of California to recognize his union. There is a religiosity about his appeal much like that of Mohandas Gandhi, the spiritual and political Indian leader who fasted to dramatize his doctrine of nonviolence.

"Brothers and sisters."

DARLING of the radical "chick," Cesar Chavez breaks bread with folk singer Joan Baez at a mass ending a 24-day fast.

IN TEN YEARS of organizing, Cesar Chavez has become a national figure and a spokesman for farm workers capable of arousing emotions close to religious fervor.

pleads Chavez, "the problem with employers and growers is not money. It's a mentality—they won't deal with this union. They can't bring themselves to deal with a union led by minority people. They feel if they do recognize a union, they're losing their manhood."

It has been exactly 10 years since the obscure Cesar Chavez, once a migrant farm worker himself, organized the National Farm Workers Association (which two years later blended into the current UFWOC). There are now 3.5 million farm workers in the United States. Only 57,000, predominantly Chicano as Cesar is, are in his organization.

But through his fierce personal dedication, Cesar Estrada Chavez has become the single, most important influence for bettering the conditions of the man or woman who works in the fields. The boycott is his weapon. The grape boycott started on Dec. 17, 1965, and ended successfully July 29, 1970, with union recognition and minimum wages.

"Encourage eating grapes," says Cesar now. "It means more work for our people."

The cause now is the boycott of lettuce, still enduring. In the privacy of a chapel room, he explains the strategy:

"We've come to realize there is no time limit on boycotts. That's probably our greatest advantage. We don't have to have it done by tomorrow or the next day."

"It produces many effects we've come to understand and evaluate. For instance, the boycott as its first act is never one of curtailing sales or stopping production. First it affects the price even before it affects the volume. It places the buyer and the employer at a more competitive angle because the buyer begins to see the boycott as a valuable weapon for him.

"We've had about 20 boycotts. The grapes is the big one. The lettuce boycott is at the stage where the grape boycott was after about three and a half years. We'll get there. It just takes time."

Time does concern him on a personal level. He has not spent one full week at home since last May. Once headquartered in the small city of Delano in the San Joaquin Valley, where his movement sprung up and where its progress is manifested by a farm workers' clinic, Chavez has retreated with his family into the Tehachapi Mountains to the south. He has eight children, the youngest of them 13.

"When I spend an hour with them," he says, "it's total. I forget about the rest of the world. We've been blessed. We had eight and no problems. They've been very good. One is at UCLA (Cesar never reached the eighth grade.) The other three didn't want to go to school. Of the four girls, three are married. One works in the fields. She's very happy. The other three work in the movement."

So do his two brothers. Cesar is 45. His health, once frail because of a congenital back problem, is now good.

MRS. ROBIN MOORE

Mrs. Robin Moore is club's guest speaker

Rotarian Paul Klipsch presented Mrs. Robin Moore, community development specialist of the Red River Regional Council on Alcoholism, in an informative talk at the Hope Rotary Club meeting Friday, January 12 at the Town and Country.

"What is alcoholism?" she asked and then answered, "A public health problem, a progressive illness, but a treatable illness." She lamented the fact that so many treatments for the alcoholic in our society today are oriented to the Skid Row type, when the fact is they do not make up the majority of the problem drinkers. Alcoholics are found in any profession, in any neighborhood, and in any family.

The speaker, who is working toward her doctorate in Social Psychology, is part of the newly organized Council on Alcoholism that works as a Task Force in 6 counties in Arkansas and 9 counties in Texas. The sole objective of the local council is control of alcoholism through education and community services.

Club President Bob Gullett announced tentative plans for Ladies Night February 16, and he welcomed two visiting Rotarians, Joe Freeman and David Day from two Texarkana clubs, and two guests, Mrs. Paul Klipsch and Richard R. Moore.
